READING

When people work at a company, they often follow rules about what to wear. However, some companies allow employees to choose their own clothes. Today, more and more workplaces are introducing this kind of policy.

What are some good things about this? Employees can work in clothes that are comfortable for them. This may help them feel more relaxed and focus better on their work. Also, they may be able to spend less money on work clothes. They do not always need to buy suits, special shoes, or other expensive items.

On the other hand, there are some problems. Employees may spend a long time deciding what to wear each day. This can be stressful for people who are not sure which clothes are suitable. In addition, some clothes may give customers or business partners the wrong impression. If employees dress too casually, others may think that the company is not professional.
