Office design has changed as companies search for ways to use their workspaces. Some businesses are reconsidering whether every employee needs a fixed desk. Today, more companies allow workers to choose a different seat each day.

What are some advantages of this system? Employees may have chances to talk with people from different departments. These conversations can help them share ideas and learn about other teams. Additionally, companies can reduce the number of seats that are left unused. This may help them use office space efficiently.

However, this system also has some disadvantages. Employees may not always be able to get the seat they prefer. This can be inconvenient when they need a quiet place or want to sit near coworkers. Another concern is that workers must carry the things they need each day. Moving laptops, documents, and items around the office can be tiring and may take extra time.
