READING

Students can choose ways to continue their education after entering high school or university. Some study only in their home country, while others seek international experiences. More students are attending schools abroad for part of their education.

Why do students choose to study abroad? They can use a foreign language in daily situations. Speaking with classmates, teachers, and local people can improve communication skills. Additionally, students can learn about cultures that are different from their own. Everyday customs, food, values, and school life may give them a view of the world.

However, studying abroad also has some disadvantages. Tuition, travel, housing, and insurance can cost a large amount of money. These expenses may be difficult for students and their families to manage. Another problem is that students may feel lonely when separated from family and friends. This feeling can be especially strong during the first few months, before they become familiar with their new surroundings.
