READING

People now use many online services to meet possible partners. Social activities and introductions through friends remain common, but digital tools offer another choice. More people are using dating apps to find romantic partners.

Why do people use dating apps? They can meet many people efficiently without attending numerous events. This may save time for users with busy schedules. In addition, users can search for people who match preferred conditions. They may choose based on age, interests, location, or future goals.

However, dating apps also have some disadvantages. The information in a profile may not always be true. Some users may hide important facts or use misleading photographs. Another problem is that repeated rejection or unsuccessful communication can harm mental health. Users may lose confidence, feel anxious, or become tired of comparing themselves with many other people on the platform repeatedly over a long period of time on social media.
