READING

Many businesses are trying to reduce the environmental effects of their products. Single-use plastic items have received particular attention in recent years. Some restaurants and cafes now provide paper straws instead of plastic ones.

What are some benefits of using paper straws? They can reduce the amount of plastic waste produced by stores and customers. Paper also breaks down more easily than plastic in many environments. In addition, paper straws can increase consumers' environmental awareness. Using them may encourage people to think about other waste and change their daily habits.

However, paper straws also have some disadvantages. Many people find them less pleasant to use. They may become soft, lose their shape, or affect the taste of a drink. Another concern is that paper straws can cost more than plastic ones. This may increase business expenses, especially for stores that serve large numbers of drinks every single very busy day.
